How many uninsured people might be shut out of coverage because they don’t have a bank account?
METRICS

A measure of how often an average article in a journal has been cited in a particular year.

For a given publication, take a journal’s “impact factor” (I.F.).

Multiply the number by 2 if there is evidence of a “policy impact”.

Add the total for each publication to see overall impact.

Citation in a government or other policy publication, or inclusion in testimony, proceedings, or a press report on the policy process.
